

The Federal Communication Commission is considering overturning New Jersey's 'Do Not Call' law because it is more stringent than the federal program.

Currently, New Jersey's 'Do Not Call' law is among the strictest in the country. As a result, many residents report almost a 100% drop in unsolicited sales calls. Now, the law is under attack from telemarketers who want the ability to call people despite the fact that they have signed up for the 'Do Not Call' list.

Governor Codey, who sponsored the law, is asking all New Jerseyans to visit the "Protect Do Not Call" web page and take a moment to file a comment with the FCC. Let them know if you think New Jersey's consumer protection laws should be weakened

Dear FCC:

Please do not touch the current DNC laws in NJ. I believe they are working very well for all of New Jersey. I have noticed first-hand the drastic difference in all those unwanted stupid calls from people I had no desire to speak with. Telemarketing is a very bogus way to do business. Let them all find an ethical way to earn money rather than chase the wind by dialing for dollars to people that do not want their services.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

JF Della Vecchia
